Introduction

The Korean Pentecost of 1907 is a significant event in the history of Christianity in Korea. It is widely regarded as the beginning of the modern Korean church and is seen as a major turning point in the spread of the gospel in the country. The event is also known as the "Great Revival" or the "Great Awakening" and is remembered for its powerful impact on the spiritual life of the Korean people.

Background

The Korean Pentecost of 1907 was a period of intense spiritual revival that began in the city of Pyongyang and spread throughout the country. It was sparked by the preaching of a Canadian missionary, Dr. Henry G. Appenzeller, who had been sent to Korea by the Presbyterian Church of Canada. Appenzeller had been sent to Korea to help establish a church and to spread the gospel. He arrived in Pyongyang in 1906 and began preaching in the city.

At first, his preaching was met with resistance from the local people, who were largely unfamiliar with Christianity. However, Appenzeller persisted and eventually his message began to take root. In 1907, a group of Korean Christians gathered in Pyongyang to celebrate the Pentecost, a Christian holiday that marks the descent of the Holy Spirit upon the apostles. During the celebration, Appenzeller preached a powerful sermon that moved the hearts of the people and sparked a spiritual revival.

The Revival

The revival that began in Pyongyang quickly spread throughout the country. Thousands of people were converted to Christianity and churches were established in many cities and towns. The revival was marked by a deep sense of spiritual renewal and a commitment to living a life of holiness and obedience to God. The revival also had a profound impact on the social and political life of the Korean people.

The revival was also marked by a renewed commitment to evangelism and missions. Many of the converts from the revival went on to become missionaries and evangelists, spreading the gospel throughout the country and beyond. The revival also had a significant impact on the Korean church, which grew rapidly in the years following the revival.

Conclusion

The Korean Pentecost of 1907 was a powerful spiritual awakening that had a profound impact on the spiritual and social life of the Korean people. It marked the beginning of the modern Korean church and was a major turning point in the spread of the gospel in the country. The revival also had a significant impact on the Korean church, which grew rapidly in the years following the revival.

The revival also had a profound impact on the social and political life of the Korean people.
