Crucifixion by the Roman authorities was a form of execution in Jesus' case. It was a cruel and painful death, and it was used to send a message to the people that the Roman Empire was in control. The Bible tells us that Jesus was crucified on a cross, and that he died for the sins of mankind.

Crucifixion in the Bible

Crucifixion is mentioned several times in the Bible. In the Old Testament, it is mentioned in the book of Deuteronomy, where it is described as a punishment for certain crimes. In the New Testament, it is mentioned in the Gospels, where Jesus is described as being crucified on a cross.

Crucifixion in the Roman Empire

Crucifixion was a common form of execution in the Roman Empire. It was used to punish criminals, slaves, and political dissidents. It was also used to send a message to the people that the Roman Empire was in control. The punishment was so severe that it was considered to be a deterrent to crime.

Crucifixion in Jesus' Case

In Jesus' case, crucifixion was used as a form of execution. The Bible tells us that Jesus was arrested and brought before the Roman governor, Pontius Pilate. Pilate found no fault in Jesus, but he was pressured by the Jewish leaders to have him crucified. The Bible tells us that Jesus was crucified on a cross, and that he died for the sins of mankind.
