The 1950s and 1960s saw a period of great revival in Ethiopia, with the Ethiopian Evangelical Revival (EER) having a profound impact on the society and culture of the country. This revival was marked by a renewed focus on the teachings of the Bible and a commitment to living out the Christian faith in everyday life.

The EER was a movement that began in the 1950s and spread throughout Ethiopia, with its main focus being on the renewal of the Christian faith. It was a time of great spiritual awakening, with many people turning to the Bible for guidance and inspiration. The revival was marked by a renewed emphasis on prayer, Bible study, and evangelism.

The EER had a profound impact on the society and culture of Ethiopia. It brought about a renewed sense of purpose and direction for the people of the country, as well as a renewed commitment to living out the Christian faith in everyday life. The revival also saw a renewed focus on the importance of education, with many schools and universities being established during this period.

The EER also had a significant impact on the political landscape of Ethiopia. The revival saw the rise of a new generation of leaders who were committed to the ideals of democracy and freedom. This new generation of leaders was instrumental in bringing about the overthrow of the monarchy in 1974 and the establishment of a democratic government.

The EER also had a profound impact on the culture of Ethiopia. It saw a renewed focus on traditional values and customs, as well as a renewed appreciation for the arts and literature. This period saw a resurgence in the popularity of traditional music and dance, as well as a renewed interest in the works of great Ethiopian writers and poets.

The EER was a period of great spiritual awakening and renewal in Ethiopia, and its impact on the society and culture of the country is still felt today. As the Bible says, “If my people, who are called by my name, will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and will heal their land” (2 Chronicles 7:14).
