Online schooling has become increasingly popular in recent years, as more and more students are opting to take classes online. While this can be a great way to get an education, it can also lead to a lack of face-to-face interaction. This can be detrimental to students, as it can lead to feelings of isolation and loneliness.

As Christians, we believe that we are all part of the body of Christ, and that we should be in fellowship with one another. The Bible tells us in 1 John 1:7, “But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.” This verse reminds us that we should be in fellowship with one another, and that we should be striving to build relationships with those around us.

The Impact of Online Schooling

When students take classes online, they are missing out on the opportunity to build relationships with their peers and teachers. This can lead to feelings of isolation and loneliness, as students are not able to interact with their peers in person. Additionally, students may not be able to get the same level of support from their teachers, as they are not able to ask questions in person or receive feedback face-to-face.

The Benefits of Face-to-Face Interaction

Face-to-face interaction is important for students, as it allows them to build relationships with their peers and teachers. This can help to create a sense of community and belonging, which can be beneficial for students' mental health and wellbeing. Additionally, face-to-face interaction can help to foster a sense of accountability, as students are more likely to stay on task when they are in the presence of their peers and teachers.

How to Foster Face-to-Face Interaction

For students who are taking classes online, there are still ways to foster face-to-face interaction. One way is to set up virtual meetings with peers and teachers. This can be done through video conferencing platforms such as Zoom or Skype. Additionally, students can set up virtual study groups, where they can work together on assignments and discuss course material.

Another way to foster face-to-face interaction is to take advantage of online resources such as discussion boards and chat rooms. These can be great ways for students to connect with one another and discuss course material. Additionally, students can use these platforms to ask questions and get feedback from their peers and teachers.
