Sex education has become a major topic in various institutions due to the increasing prevalence of sexual activity among young people. This has led to a need for more comprehensive education about sex and sexuality, as well as the risks associated with it. In this blog post, we will explore why sex education has become a major topic in various institutions from a Christian perspective. We will also look at how the Bible speaks to this issue, and provide some discussion questions and a quiz to help you further explore the topic.

The Bible speaks to the importance of sex education in several ways. First, it emphasizes the importance of teaching children about sex and sexuality in a way that is appropriate for their age and maturity level. In Deuteronomy 6:7, God commands us to “teach [our] children diligently” and to “talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.” This passage emphasizes the importance of teaching children about sex and sexuality in a way that is appropriate for their age and maturity level.

Second, the Bible speaks to the importance of teaching children about the consequences of sexual activity. In Proverbs 5:3-4, God warns us to “guard your heart with all diligence, for out of it flow the issues of life.” This passage emphasizes the importance of teaching children about the consequences of sexual activity, such as the risk of sexually transmitted diseases and unplanned pregnancy.

Third, the Bible speaks to the importance of teaching children about the importance of abstinence. In 1 Corinthians 6:18-20, Paul writes, "Flee from sexual immorality. Every other sin a person commits is outside the body, but the sexually immoral person sins against his own body." This passage emphasizes the importance of teaching children about the importance of abstinence, and the consequences of engaging in sexual activity outside of marriage.
